

THE NORWAY ADVERTISER

(OXFORD COUNTY, ME.)

NUMBER 39. Single Copy 5 Cents.

NORWAY, ME. FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1933.

VOLUME LXIV

Tax Money

Money is rolling in to pay town and county taxes. The total committee for 1933 and to date $39,884.75 has been turned to the collector and put in the hands of the collector.

Bickford has been long out of the town and has grown tired of waiting for a night session. He might not lose time out on his job. A lively fight on Water Street that afternoon was the reason for intervention by Sheriff W. O. Frothingham.

Norway Municipal Court

Homer Truman and Jack Birmingham both of Norway, pleaded guilty to an array in the street. Each was fined $3 and costs and time was given until Oct. 7 for payment. The hearing was Monday evening before Judge Harry M. Shaw on the request of the respondents for a night session. They might not lose time out on their job. A lively fight on Water Street that afternoon was the reason for intervention by Sheriff W. O. Frothingham.

NORWAY GRANGE

The regular meeting was held September 23. Meeting was called to order at 7:15 o'clock standard time by Worthy Master J. Merton Wyman in the chair. Opening song, America. Saluting the flag. Roll call of officers. As their was no meeting the first of the month on account of so many working in the corn shop, there was lots of business done.

The Grange voted to hold a Grange Fair, the date not set yet. They voted to exhibit at the World Waterford Fair. It was also voted to put on Booster's Night, October 14, as it is impossible to start it on September 30th. They voted to start their meetings at 7:00 from now on.

LOCAL CONTEST

The Local Contest of the 4-H Clubs will be held Friday evening, October 6, at Norway Grange Hall, with the Penneesseewassee Sewing Club, Mrs. Edith G. M. Greenleaf, leader, the Penneesseewassee Cooking and Housekeeping Club, Mrs. Edith Buck, leader, and the Willing Workers, Alpheus Jackson, leader.

These contests are of much interest, showing what the club members have accomplished during the year. Parents are especially invited. The leaders are all giving of their time and energy and will appreciate any cooperation given by the parents in attending the meeting. There will be a program at 8 o'clock given by the young people.

RETURNS AFTER FIFTEEN YEARS

Dr. J. W. Hasty and his wife, who was Nellie Dinsmore, are here from Clarinda, Iowa, visiting her sister, Mrs. Jay Dinsmore Whitman, and husband. They are accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. D. Hasty and Mary Hasty, who are here from Washington, D. C., where he is in charge of installing a large heating plant in all government buildings except the Capitol. Mrs. Hasty was a teacher in Norway schools nearly forty years ago. This is the first trip to Maine in fifteen years and Thursday was the 39th anniversary of their wedding, the ceremony being performed in the Dinsmore residence where they are now visiting.

HORSESHOE TOURNAMENT

Local horseshoe tossers came home with top honors at the annual East Auburn Grange Fair Tournament last Saturday. Fifteen players were entered, each man to play each other.

Ralph Robinson of South Paris and Tony Lombard of Norway moved down all opposition with comparative ease and finished up with thirteen victories apiece with no defeats, with one game to be played between them which turned out to be a fast and furious game. After the first few pitches, Robinson proved to be the best tosser with a twenty point lead at the end of a fifty point game.

Robinson, 55 points; 82 rings. Lombard, 55 points; 82 rings. Dickey of Norway, Mass., took third place on seven wins and five losses.

GEORGE W. FIELD

Following an illness of three months, George W. Field, passed away, September 29, at the home of his nephew, Edward Blake, Summer Street, Norway. He came here from Gray about one year ago and was cared for by the nephew when a boy lived in his family at Casco.

The deceased was born in Cumberland, Nov. 12, 1858, the son of Jacob and Phoebe Blake. He had been a carpenter and resided in South Paris for twenty-five years and a time at Gray.

He was twice married and two children were born but all are deceased.

Surviving him are two sisters and one brother, Mrs. Anna M. Field of Lewiston, Mrs. Harriet Lombard of South Paris, and Mrs. Alfred A. Field of Roxbury, Mass. beside a number of nephews and nieces.

The body was taken to Raymond, Me., and the funeral held in the Hay storehouse church, the remodeled house where Nathaniel Hawthorne was born. Rev. Samuel Brown a life long friend conducted the service. Burial was in the Mount cemetery.

Child's Health Council

Thirteen Towns Represented

Thirteen Oxford County towns were represented at the Maine Child Health Council at the Norway Methodist Church Wednesday, which opened at 9 o'clock with registration.

Miss Grace C. Howard of Brownfield, the State President, presided. Rev. Mr. Callahan of Kezar Falls opened the session with prayer and Rev. W. W. Lyon, pastor of the church, gave the welcome. Rev. Callahan spoke in place of Governor Louis J. Bean, who had been invited to give the opening address. He told a little of what the meeting was for and explained at length that the welfare of the child depends on its proper feeding and clothing.

Retires from Mail Service

John P. Judkins Served Route No. 2 Thirty-two Years

After 32 years service as rural mail carrier, John P. Judkins retires from his work in the Norway district on Sept. 30 and his route will be combined with No. 2 and handled by Walter P. O'Brien. The boys in the post office presented him a sum of money as a slight token of their friendship.

Mr. Judkins entered the service for Uncle Sam in 1901 when the R. F. D. was installed in Norway. One pouch held all the letters and papers for a single trip during the first few years when a horse and buggy was used on the 26 miles or daily grind over poor roads often gullied or deeply drifted.

Plans were completed and committees appointed for the annual parent-teacher-banquet Friday evening, Oct. 6, and Rally Day, Oct. 8.

Heard and Seen at Advertiser Office

Miss Blood, Mrs. Eva Kimball and H. H. Harmon of the Biddeford Daily Journal were in town, Saturday afternoon, and made us a pleasant call. Mrs. Kimball's brother, Mr. Cook of Biddeford who has been ill for some weeks is slowly improving.

Wild ducks are settling in coves around Crockett's Bridge, according to reports. Some years ago local sportsmen chipped up for wild rice and fed it to a ruffed gull that made a landing. There is talk about having part of the bog and the lower portion of the lake set apart and protected by law as a preserve for wild water fowl. Apparently the cove knows their ponds and would remain until ice time if unmolested.

Red Head, Tap-Dancer

By Harry C. Walker

CHAPTER XIII

Then one of those things happened that so often have the power to make or break the fortunes of those who are in the public eye. It happened to Elaine, who had been dancing for public recognition in great cities, and for which hundreds of these hard-working people pray night and day will happen to them and bring their names into the glare of publicity if nothing more. There wasn't much to it, this about the little dancer. Just a few lines in the daily piece written by a famous columnist for one of the metropolitan newspapers.

"Down at Harold's in the lower fifth is a slim girl with strange-colored hair burns up the boards nightly with her tap-dancing."

That was all. But it was enough to bring the corpulent that was Barney Cochrane to the humble night club designed as Harold's. He came in his great car with his gold-rimmed spectacles, an emerald-lined coat and diamond-studded cane, and watched with descending eye the flashing vision of feminine loveliness that was the cause of his being there in Harold's with the common patron. He was pleased with what he saw, and polished his glasses and the glittering diamonds in the cane with a silk handkerchief before rising from his table to seek out the Red Head. He found her with a surprised case, and from a pocket he drew a contract that would be valid for four months. It had an attractive dotted line near the bottom of the sheet, and upon it it was named Elaine Winton. He appeared, written in a small, girlish hand. This accomplished, Barney Cochrane pocketed the document and frowned down at the Red Head and the dark-haired girl beside her and spoke in a patronizing tone.

"Miss Winton, for a period of four months you will dance for me in my theatre at two hundred and fifty a week, alternating between the Music Palace and the Century. After that, if you prove satisfactory to me in every way, I will consider grooming you for a part in my 'Divorces' of next season. You will start at the Century next Thursday. Call there at once and see the manager. Good day, and thank you."

Janet Duncan, who had witnessed the signing of the paper, rushed the Red Head into the dressing room where they performed together a dance of joy that would have appeared quite incongruous on a stage.

"Miss Winton, for a period of four months you will dance for me in my theatre at two hundred and fifty a week, alternating between the Music Palace and the Century. After that, if you prove satisfactory to me in every way, I will consider grooming you for a part in my 'Divorces' of next season. You will start at the Century next Thursday. Call there at once and see the manager. Good day, and thank you."

With quiet determination and wildly throbbing pulses, Elaine Winton made the big step upward from Harold's to the West Coast Theatre and its grand old outward coolness and marked self-assurance. The first night that she stepped onto the huge stage she gave an exhibition of tap-dancing with embellishments that brought many of the wretches to their feet as they signified their approval of her work in no uncertain way.

But her dancing was not alone what won the crowd, over so thoroughly. It was her vivid beauty and sparkling personality plus the fiery, inspiring dance steps that turned the trick and brought their enthusiasm to the surface. They liked someone different than the ordinary run of performers, someone with dash and color and enslaving little mannerisms, and they knew at once that this little dancer had them all with some to spare.

Reporters interviewed her and drew forth the short story of her life, famous actors and writers whom she had expected never to meet paid her their compliments and accepted her as one of them. And, to her amazement, exclusive shops sent her gifts of clothing, shoes and jewelry.

"Why should they give me all these?" she queried of Janet, failing to understand such unusual generosity.

"You are someone, that's why," Janet told her with a hug. The shops where these things came from were looking forward to an increase in sales after you appear in public wearing some creation of theirs. They don't stand to lose anything by this gesture of generosity. It's good advertising for them. See how it will work to their advantage?"

So, so that's why they do this, to make me advertise for them. Well, it makes no difference, I still think they are being very kind, no matter if I unwittingly earn a thousand dollars for every shop, decided the Red Head, a little flattered by the sudden fame that was hers.

Thanksgiving Day came, and with it the hundreds of children in the streets, ringing doorbells and asking every man, woman and child the same long question, "Anything for Thanksgiving, Mister? Anything for Thanksgiving, Missus?"

"Why do they do this?" asked Elaine of Duncan, extremely puzzled. "I shouldn't think their parents would let them. Why, it's really begging."

"Oh, no. We don't think of them as beggars," said Janet. "It's an established custom here, in these parts anyway, and we always have something to hand out to the little tots. Give them anything from a penny to an overcoat, and they go away satisfied. I sometimes try to do it to get the Christmas spirit warmed up a month ahead of time."

"It's certainly a new custom on me," revealed the Red Head.

While over the teens a man entered the building from the street and came up to the apartment and saluted Warren as a soldier would a superior officer. When Elaine looked up at the face of this man, her heart seemed to freeze within her, and a nameless fear crept upon her senses.

"This visitor was the man with the pitted face, the man who had acted so strangely toward her during the bus ride to New York. She thought that he recognized her in turn, but the expressionless face betrayed no confidence of the mind behind them.

"Miss Winton, this is Wally Stone, my very good friend and right-hand man," said the soldier, rising to make the introduction. Elaine inclined her head slightly in acknowledgement of the man's muttered words of greeting.

"I believe we have seen each other before," she ventured cautiously, meeting Stone's gaze steadily.

"The lady is right," he admitted to Warren. "I thought I had seen her charmed face before. It was on a bus coming into this city. I remember that."

"It was," confirmed the girl. "That's the face, if you two have met before," smiled Warren. "Makes you old friends, so to speak. This is Elaine Winton, my daughter, and she is here to help me with my business."

HOW DID THE PRINCE FIND CINDERELLA?

That's a little story everyone knows. With a slipper as his only clue to the charming miss he had danced with....he went right out and found her.

Perhaps you'll never dance with a prince....they're pretty scarce these days....so are coaches-and-fours and Fairy Godmothers. But dance you will....and you'll love the pretty "Pumps by Fisher" that complete your evening ensemble.

Everybody notices distinctive shoes....and a girl does appreciate that, doesn't she? Please remember there is a "Pump by Fisher" to complete every one of your ensembles—either for street or evening, or when you stay at home.
